

TEAL Graduate Assistantship Award Guidelines and Qualifications

A TEAL graduate assistantship is a competitive award and special opportunity in pursuit of a graduate degree. A departmental assistantship allows students to focus on their doctoral program while interacting with program faculty and making contributions to the department, its productivity and students. When an assistantship includes research assignments, students participate in research studies and if assigned teaching responsibilities, gain valuable instructional experiences in post-secondary education.

To be eligible for this assistantship, a student must be matriculated full-time and maintain full-time status during fall and spring semesters throughout the duration of the assistantship. An awardee must also be able to provide valuable assistance to the department and faculty. These essential responsibilities prevent full-time employment elsewhere, as the individual is compensated as a department employee and receives a tuition waiver.

A TEAL graduate assistantship is awarded for 9 months during one academic year. Students must apply each year. International applicants are expected to adhere to the Office of Global Engagement and VISA requirements. Exceptional performance with programmatic and assistantship objectives, departmental need, and available funds, an assistantship may be renewed for subsequent years up to four consecutive academic years. Summer employment (without a tuition waiver) may be possible and is assigned on a case-by-case basis according to departmental needs, performance, and funding. The TEAL graduate assistantship follows the School of Graduate Studies expectations outlined in the USU Catalog.
